Terminal Disclaimer

The terminal disclaimer filed on June 13, 2005 disclaiming the terminal portion of any patent granted on this application which would extend beyond the expiration date of US Patent has been reviewed and is accepted. The terminal disclaimer has been recorded.

Claim Rejections - 35 USC § 102

The following is a quotation of the appropriate paragraphs of 35 U.S.C. 102 that form the basis for the rejections under this section made in this Office action:

A person shall be entitled to a patent unless -

- (e) the invention was described in-
- (1) an application for patent, published under section 122(b), by another filed in the United States before the invention by the applicant for patent, except that an international application filed under the treaty defined in section 351(a) shall have the effect under this subsection of a national application published under section 122(b) only if the international application designating the United States was published under Article 21(2)(a) of such treaty in the English language; or
- (2) a patent granted on an application for patent by another filed in the United States before the invention by the applicant for patent, except that a patent shall not be deemed filed in the United States for the purposes of this subsection based on the filing of an international application filed under the treaty defined in section 351(a).
- (b) the invention was patented or described in a printed publication in this or a foreign country or in public use or on sale in this country, more than one year prior to the date of application for patent in the United States.

Claims 1, 12 and 14 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 102(e) as being anticipated by Vacanti et al US Patent 6,027,744.

Vacanti et al discloses a prosthetic device comprising an extracellular matrix portion (14) having a solidify hydrogen composition (16) with live cells (18) and a synthetic mesh portion (12) coupled to the extracellular portion (see col. 11, lines 1-20). The synthetic material and the extracellular matrix portion are biodegradable (see col. 5, lines 21-24; and col. 7, lines 10-11). Additionally, the synthetic fiber is made of Vycryl (see col. 6, lines 1-4). Regarding the extracellular matrix, the claims disclosed above are given their broadest reasonable interpretation. In re Pearson, 181 USPQ 641 (CCPA 1974). For the above reasons, the Examiner has used only a prosthetic device having tissue precursor cells.

Regarding the new limitations in claim 1, it is an inherent characteristic of biocompatible polymeric struts (12) to have a rate of absorption slower than the extracellular matrix. It has been held that a claim is anticipated if each element of the claim is found, either expressly described or under principles of inherency, in a single prior art reference, or that the claimed invention was previously known or embodied in a single prior art device or practice. Kalman vs. Kimberly-Clark Corp., 218 USPQ 789.

Claims 1-5, 7, 8, 11 and 15 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 102(b) as being anticipated by Buirge et al US Patent 5,693,085.

Buirge et al discloses a bioprosthetic device comprising a sheet of naturally occurring extracellular matrix and a sheet of synthetic mesh coupled to the matrix. The matrix is a sheet of SIS and the device is a top tissue layer of naturally occurring extracellular matrix and is coupled to a bottom tissue layer of naturally occurring matrix and the sheet of synthetic mesh is coupled to and positioned between the two layers (see Fig. 7; col. 4, lines 6-24; and col. 5, lines 10-15).

Regarding the new limitations in claim 1, it is an inherent characteristic of biocompatible polymeric struts (see col. 3, lines 36-40) to have a rate of absorption slower than the extracellular matrix. It has been held that a claim is anticipated if each element of the claim is found, either expressly described or under principles of inherency, in a single prior art reference, or that the claimed invention was previously known or embodied in a single prior art device or practice. Kalman vs. Kimberly-Clark Corp., 218 USPQ 789.

Allowable Subject Matter

Claims 9, and 17 are objected to as being dependent upon a rejected base claim, but would be allowable if rewritten in independent form including all of the limitations of the base claim and any intervening claims.

Claim 10 is allowed.
